Yearly fundraising events such as Cowboy Up for CASA provide opportunities to show recognition to our volunteers who give so much to help the children we serve.

Training to become a CASA takes approximately thirty hours. The time necessary to complete the duties on an individual case is ten to fifteen hours per month. To be a CASA is to be the "eyes and ears of the court" on behalf of a child.

Sharing fun at celebrations like the Blytheville Chili Event not only brings more awareness to CASA's mission, but also provides a chance for our children and advocates to spend time together.

We can't control where abused children come from, but we can make a difference in where they go!
